Answer questions 56-60 according to the passage below.

One of the subjects at my school is called Media Studies. As a part of the course, our class recently visited a nearby university to meet Media Studies students there and do a project with them. After having a quick tour of the university, we were taken to the Media Studies department's TV studio. It was bigger than I had expected, with rows of comfortable seats for the audience and amazing technology – just how I imagine a proper studio to be. We took our seats and listened to three Media Studies staff describing what it's like to study the subject at university. Some of us asked the staff some questions that we thought about beforehand to the staff. I didn't find the courage to ask my question, but I didn't mind as I wasn't a good speaker in front of such a large group of people.

Next, the university students organized a discussion about Media studies topics. All of us in the audience were given the chance to vote on certain things. It was very interesting to see that people shared so many opinions. After the discussion, we were divided into teams for our projects.

Each team had to create something to show all the other teams. One group made a radio news report, and another produced a sad documentary. My team performed a short drama about robots. Everyone worked really hard, and the results were fantastic. The day allowed me to try out something completely different and get an idea of how exciting it is to take Media Studies at university.
